Year of the Eucharist Reflection

St. Isidore of Seville (560-636) was among the most learned scholars of his age whose writings establish an early synthesis of Western thought. In his encyclopedic work, Etymologies, St. Isidore treats the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, discussing the various names given to the Eucharist. This brief excerpt underscores the exalted nature of these names and the reality they indicate.

The sacrifice is named after the manner of a sacred deed; for by a mysterious prayer it is consecrated for our sake in memorial of the Passion of the Lord, whence, by His command, we affirm it to be the Body and Blood of Christ. The sacrifice is of the fruits of the earth until it is sanctified by the invisible Spirit of God and made the Sacrament. And the Greeks call the bread and chalice of this Sacrament the Eucharist, which is translated in Latin, bona gratia [good grace, or favor]. And what greater good is there than the Body and Blood of Christ?
